A PROMISE IN THE RAINBOW

It shall be, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the rainbow shall be seen in the cloud; and I will remember my covenant which is between Me and you...

Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the ungodly... But his delight is in the law of the Lord... and in His law he ponders day and night...

Psalm 1:1-3

Ten weeks already; the time seems to have evaporated! We’ve been reminded (again) of an important truth: It is GOD who plans our steps, out of His sovereign and perfect will. In Ecclesiastes 4:9-12 we read, Two are better than one... For if they fall, one will lift up his companion... This has never been so true as in our present circumstances. Without CB (and your prayers) I would have been in serious trouble; my vestibular disorder brought on by allergies has allowed me only a few days in this time to function normally. Believe me, I take those good days and use them to the max... but it has been an emotional burden and I’m often tempted to ask the futile question, why me? God is not required to provide an answer, nor do I truly expect one... except, why not me? I know in the larger scheme of things, this is only a tiny blip in time.

As if my problems have not been enough, CB had a crown fall out of one tooth, and is suffering with an infection beneath another tooth—and all this without having dental insurance! PTL she was able to see a local dentist and is taking strong antibiotics to combat the infection, but the crown can’t be reset. We praise God for provision of funds to help offset the costs so far. In spite of these issues, Cathy has been carrying the majority of physical work including cooking and driving. On good days I do whip up a meal, drive places, and get some windows washed or accomplish other domestic chores... but the lion’s share has fallen to her. I can attest that she’s carried on with grace and good humor. Here’s a glimpse of a typical day on the island with Two Cathys...

MORNING: Up early (6:00-ish) to greet Momi who spends nights in the garage; feed her breakfast. After our quiet time in the Scriptures we get the morning started: showers, breakfast, check Internet for email and Facebook messages. Tasks on any normal day might include mowing the back yard, washing windows/screens, personal laundry, picking fruit, clearing invasive lantana from the property perimeter, dragging and tossing downed palm fronds over the pali, checking for varmints, grooming the dog or other doggie-care deeds. Wednesdays (usually) we make a “town run”—which can take from three to five hours round trip (16 miles one way to Kapaa, or 23 miles one way to Lihue)—including handling Linda’s mail-forwarding procedures and any necessary grocery shopping. At times we stop at our favorite thrift stores from which we have often found good used books and items of clothing... and CB often finds things for craft projects.

AFTERNOON: If we’re on a town run we pack a light lunch to eat in the car so we can get home in the early afternoon. If we’re staying at home, after lunch we may read a while—either our ongoing Bible study material or some wholesome, entertaining book. Monday afternoons we participate in a women’s Bible study in nearby Princeville. Occasionally we stop at the public library there and use our 3-month borrower’s permit. We always keep an eye on the weather, watching for the need to close windows, pull blinds or turn on fans. This past week we spent an hour or two one day at Anini Beach; it’s close, easily accessible and provides tiny shells for CB to use in mosaics.

EVENING: The day concludes with what CB calls the “PPP”... a required walk to the eastern point of the property on “Pig Patrol”(the extra “P” is for the little pouch with doggie biscuit rewards for Momi). A snap of the pouch latch is guaranteed to get a “Pavlov” response from our fearless watchdog. As I write this, a pack of pig-hunting dogs is roaming at full cry in the valley below the house... Momi is responding in kind... ouch! After the PPP we enjoy our dinner and sometimes check TV reports for weather forecasts (my head responds like a barometer to low pressure cells) and potential hurricane activity in the Pacific. Hurricane season goes through September so we stay alert. Thursday nights we join a small group Bible study at a home nearby... and for 7 consecutive weeks we attended most of the Wednesday dinner & movie fellowship nights hosted by Calvary Chapel of Kilauea. Evenings spent at home always include a time of prayer after dinner then we’ll read, play a card game, or work on craft projects. Life on the mission field is never dull but often challenging. We truly appreciate your prayers on our behalf. God bless you!
